SUB TITLES

1. On the great plains of the West and Northwest, where once roved the American Buffalo, are to be found immense ranches. Here the cattle wander and feed until their owners are ready to ship them to the packing house.
2. Each ranch has a particular brand for its cattle and often the name of the ranch is taken from this mark. For instance, this ranch, located near Calgary, Canada, is named "Bar-U". The headquarters of the "—U" Ranch.
3. "Alex." Fleming, manager of the ranch. The "—U" covers 125,000 acres of ground.
4. On the ranges of Southern Alberta, Canada, the cattle (excepting dairy cows) winter in the open.
5. Free to wander at will for a year at a time, the cattle become widely scattered.
6. To "round-up" the strayed cattle means that the cow-puncher must spend days in the saddle on his lonely ride over the range.
7. Soon the wanderers begin to gather by the thousands.
8. Then the calves are "cut out" from the herd for they as yet bear no mark of identification and must therefore be branded.
9. The newcomers are shown into the "— U" record office, the branding corral.
10. Hot fires are prepared and the branding irons made ready.
11. Branding.
12. But here they are again free to lose themselves for another year.
13. The End.
